

Driving change in research culture through knowledge translation

Owen Howlett, Sally Harris, Angela Crombie & Marcus Gardner

An organisation demonstrating an active research culture will have clinicians consuming, participating in, generating and translating research knowledge. A structured program has been developed to enhance research culture and capability to deliver evidence based practice.

Knowledge
translation
education &
mentoring

Clinician led
knowledge
translation
projects

Engagement
of healthcare consumers in research

Leading & participating in knowledge
generation
research
studies

Health
and Human Services

The impacts of the research translation program will be measured by the Research Capacity and Culture Tool, research activity, and education and mentoring utility and impact.

For more information contact: Owen Howlett ohowlett@bendigohealth.org.au